

Schweitzer Studios Commissions Brochure

First of all, thank you for your interest in commissioned work! I've drawn all kinds of subjects but keep coming back to animals. There's just so much personality in these creatures we share the planet with. I'm honored that you're thinking about ordering a custom illustration. This guide is designed to walk you through the process.

1 Choosing a Subject

Although the majority of commissions depict beloved pets, you may also request a custom illustration of a wildlife animal. Reference photos are required for pet portraits but optional for the wildlife route.

Cheeto
¾ pose, strong lighting, and high definition, captures his personality.

Mystery Online Cat
Blurry, too dark, weak lighting... and a little scary

2 Choosing a Photo

A strong reference photo is the key to a beautiful portrait! All pet commissions require at least one photo to work from. The final illustration will be based on that image. I look for 4 main elements when selecting references:

Lighting — A combination of light and shadow creates a greater sense of depth and makes for a more exciting portrait!

Pose — I prefer three-quarter pose photos taken from your pet's height. They tend to be more dynamic than head-on portraits.

Essence — You know your pet much better than I do! Submit photos that capture your animal's personality and character.

Quality — High-definition photos are a must! Blurry photos prevent me from zooming in to see all the important little details.

Slate

My favorite way to draw. These illustrations are hand drawn on slabs of slate using charcoal and pastels. When working on slate, the natural ridges and shape of the stone become part of the artwork itself! I recommend this style to anyone looking for a truly unique, rustic portrait.

Pricing

Protecting Your Slate Artwork

Each portrait is sprayed with a varnish in order to protect the illustration and prevent fading or smudging. That being said, the artwork is not meant to be touched and should be kept indoors.

It goes without saying that slate slabs have sharp edges. Make sure to handle the artwork with care and use the included metal stand to display the piece. Please let me know if you have any questions about long term care for the artwork!

Slate Examples

They say a picture is worth a thousand words... here are some examples of past commissioned work, along with the main reference photo I used for each portrait. You can find more examples on my website, SchweitzerStudios.com

Custom Bald Eagle Tribute
20 x 24", provided by the customer

Occasionally someone will have something in mind that goes beyond the scope of my normal work! I love these projects. This eagle tribute was created for the top bald eagle rehabilitationist in the country... what a job! He provided the 24lb piece of slate and gave me free reign to create a tribute to our national bird. Let me know if you have an idea for something a bit outside the box! We'll work together on details and I'll create something special!
